

Eurochild advocates for children's rights and well-being to be at the heart of policymaking.

We are a network of organisations working with and for children throughout Europe, striving for a society that respects the rights of children. We influence policies, build internal capacities, facilitate mutual learning and exchange practice and research. The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child is the foundation of all our work.

Introduction

Norah Gibbons. President

Jana Hainsworth. Secretary General

Dear friends, supporters and colleagues.

Eurochild is passionate about making a positive difference in the lives of children. We know that lasting change requires a shift in public attitudes and better laws, policies and public spending choices. That's why, as a network, we focus on influencing people with power: power to lead public discourse and power to make decisions that will prioritise children's rights.

The vast majority of policies that impact children are not made at EU level. But the EU still yields extraordinary influence. It has financial power, creates peer pressure across Member States and coordinates economic and fiscal policies. 2017 saw two important breakthroughs in the political rhetoric at EU level which, if properly followed through, can create a more favourable environment for investing in children.

The first is the European Pillar of Social Rights which was proclaimed by leaders of the Council, Parliament and Commission in November 2017. It sets 20 principles to drive upwards social convergence across the EU. Protecting children from poverty and promoting childcare is principle 11. The EU will monitor progress through the Semester and the Social Scoreboard. The second comes from the European Parliament. In his video address to our joint event with UNICEF on Universal Children's Day, President Tajani committed to organise an annual event in the Plenary together with children and carry out a stocktaking of the Parliament's efforts to protect children's rights. In 2018 we need to ensure these commitments don't remain empty promises. For example, a big focus of ours is now on influencing the next EU budget.

What makes Furochild stand out from the multiple voices influencing the EU's agenda? Firstly, it's our membership which spans 33 European countries and includes national coalitions of children's rights organisations in 18 of them. Secondly, it's our efforts to involve children and young people in a meaningful way in all our work. We are piloting National Eurochild Forums in three countries, and have established a Eurochild Children's Council to advise us on our next strategy and advocacy work. Our 2018 conference, taking place in Opatija Croatia on 29-31 October, involves children throughout the process of planning and delivery.

Members will soon adopt our new 3-year strategic plan (2019-2021) - the fruit of a participatory process involving members and children. We want to help end child poverty in Europe, end institutional care for all children, and get children's rights higher up the political agenda at all levels. Strengthening the advocacy capacity of our members, as well as children and young people themselves, is central to what we do. We look to the future with optimism knowing the foundations for a strong children's rights movement across Europe are now firmly in place.

Yours sincerely,

Norah Gibbons, President

Jana Hainsworth, Secretary General

Making economic policies work to end child poverty and invest in children

The word 'social' appeared many times in speeches of European leaders this year. Despite this increased attention to social concerns, the EU's economic policies offered fewer recommendations to EU Member States to reduce child poverty and promote children's well-being, as compared to previous years.

Eurochild monitors the European Semester, which is the EU's annual cycle of economic policy coordination, to assess whether its policies match the speeches. This becomes ever more crucial as the number of children growing up in poverty in Europe is not falling, despite increasing employment rates.

24.8 million

children in EU face poverty or social exclusion = 26.4% of population (Eurostat, 2016)

The 2017 Eurochild report on the European Semester gave a prominent role to country profiles based on 22 members' inputs. The report features 18 country profiles, designed to inform European Commission officials working on the country-specific analysis, and support members' national advocacy.

Protecting children from poverty recognised in European Pillar of Social Rights

Eurochild's insistence that the European Commission prioritise efforts to tackle child poverty have paid off. 'Protection from child poverty' is one of the 20 principles of the European Pillar of Social Rights, which is now the EU's reference framework for employment and social policy.

As the European Pillar of Social Rights becomes the framework for shaping proposals in the social policy field, Eurochild will continue to bring evidence and policy recommendations, promoting investment in children from a children's rights perspective.

One of the infographics produced to explain our demands for an EU #socialrights Pillar

Supported by all EU institutions, the European Pillar of Social Rights has the weight and support to influence economic and social policies and guide the investment priorities of the EU. Along with our members, we contributed to the consultation preceding the adoption of this framework, and advocated for child poverty to be recognised as a key challenge to address through this new social agenda.

Having child poverty in such a key policy framework of the EU is an opportunity to push for the implementation of the 2013 European Commission Recommendation on Investing in Children which still offers solid EU policy guidance on fighting child poverty and promoting children's well-being.

European Pillar of Social Rights, we expect economic policies to better reflect the real needs of people and society from now on. The 2018 Semester will be a first test. Levels of child poverty remain unacceptably high across the EU. Dedicating one of the 20 principles in the Pillar to protecting children from poverty and providing access to quality early childhood education and care is symbolic and important but now it is time for action."

EU spending on children's rights

Children make up one fifth of the population in Europe and have the greatest stake in its future. Yet, there is no explicit focus on them in the EU's spending plans, and funding programmes that impact children are not designed with their needs in mind.

EU funds have the potential to catalyse national reforms to better address poverty and other social challenges. In some countries, EU funds have supported reforms of child protection and welfare systems, contributing to end institutional care and to strengthen family support and community-based services. However, mistakes have been made and opportunities lost. It is important that the lessons learnt are integrated into the design of the next budget.

The next EU budget will start in 2021 but its preparations were already underway in 2017, both at the EU institutions and in Eurochild. By matching its financial resources to its priority areas, the EU will be able to increase its impact on national policies. It is our mission to make sure that ending child poverty and deinstitutionalisation in Europe are prioritised and have specific resources allocated from the EU budget.

Eurochild's position paper on investing in children through the post-2020 MFF offers suggestions on how EU spending can have maximum impact on Member States' efforts to reduce child poverty, to break the cycle of disadvantage and, ultimately, to build more inclusive and prosperous societies. The Opening Doors for Europe's Children Campaign also produced policy recommendations aimed at the next MFF, based on evidence of the impact of EU funds in the EU, enlargement and neighbouring countries for protection of children in alternative care.

We are raising our policy recommendations with key targets individually and collectively with partners, including with the EU Alliance for Investing in Children, European Expert Group on the Transition from Institutional to Community-based care and preparing our National Partner Networks (national coalitions of children's rights organisations) to discuss these recommendations with their governments.

Read all our recommendations for the EU's post-2020 Budget

Building momentum to open doors for Europe's institutionalised children

Eurochild advocates for child welfare and protection reforms to ensure that all children receive high quality, individualised care and support. In the current funding period (2014-2020), the transition from institutional to community-based care is an explicit priority of the EU's structural and investment funds.

National coordinators and international partners of the campaign meet in Brussels to accelerate change through joint action Eurochild coordinates the Opening Doors for Europe's Children campaign in partnership with five international organisations and civil society across 16 European countries. We help national organisations monitor the use of EU funds and promote investment in family support services, as well as high quality alternative care.

Launched in 2013, the *Opening Doors*Campaign is the eyes and ears on the ground for children in alternative care.

The campaign conducts yearly analysis with experts from the field in each of the 16 countries. Despite the positive steps taken by the EU and national governments, the Opening Doors Country fact sheets 2017 revealed that a lot remains to be done. EU funds have often been used to build small group homes, which can still perpetuate an institutional culture. In addition, too little attention has been given to investment in community-based services that can prevent children from entering in the care system. The 2017 country fact sheets show that poverty, disability and ethnic origin are still underlying causes of children entering the care system.

In 2018 and 2019, the EU institutions will be negotiating the next EU budget. Based on the lessons learnt, we aim to ensure that EU's role, funds and policies from 2021 are maintained, strengthened and expanded to support families and to end institutional care in Europe.

Measuring what matters

Childonomics The Eurochild Network

Looked at from a long-term perspective, there is a strong economic case to be made for the realisation of children's rights. With 'Childonomics', we are steadily building the evidence base to support the economic argument. In 2017, we published the conceptual framework which aims to capture the full range of services that children and families can access that may impact on outcomes at individual, family, community and societal level. It offers a way of mapping services and programmes in any given national or sub-national setting.

The research team also developed a methodology which builds on elements of social return on investment methods and models for appraising economic return on investment. It has been tested in Malta and Romania, selected by because both countries recently embarked on policy reforms, which emphasize the need to invest in prevention and early intervention.

Maria Herczog, Chief Scientific Advisor of Childonomics, presented the project at the International Foster Care Organisation 2017 World Conference in Malta

Malta

Malta's national children's policy launched for consultation in 2016 proposes 4 long-term goals and short-term outcomes.

MALTA'S NATIONAL CHILDREN'S POLICY GOALS

Long-term goals

- Have active and healthy generations
- Protect children and ensure an adequate living environment
- Grow-up to be independent and responsible adults
- Become active participants within their community and State

Short-term outcomes

- Children living an active and healthy lifestyle
- Children living in a safe and economically stable family environment
- Children achieving their maximum potential in education and later in future employment
- Children are respected and enabled to be active participants in their social surroundings

Romania

The government has set specific objectives aimed at breaking the cycle of intergenerational poverty. It has adopted policies that aim to target social transfers and social services at particularly vulnerable geographic areas, communities and population groups including children and families, people with disabilities, children without parental care and Roma communities.

The measures should improve access to education, employment, housing and lead to better health outcomes.

The measures complement the National Strategy for the Promotion and Protection of Children's Rights 2014-2020, which focuses specifically on deinstitutionalisation and aims to reduce by 25% the number and rate of children entering the special protection system by 2020.

Bringing a children's rights perspective into policies and legislation

Protection and integration of refugee and migrant children in Europe

Eurochild produced a publication of 16 inspiring practices that show how child protection services can protect and help integration of refugee and migrant children in Europe. This publication, produced jointly with our member SOS Children's Villages International, offers solutions and promising examples from 12 countries. It was launched in the presence of officials from all levels of government, including the Mayor of Athens and experts from the field who work directly with children. This publication acts as a resource to support practitioners and help them advocate towards national policy makers.

Jana Hainsworth speaks at launch of 'Let Children be Children' publication at the EU Committee of Regions, Brussels in November 2017

Helping European institutions embed children's participation

Eurochild was invited by the EU Agency for Fundamental Rights to involve children in the discussions on fundamental rights in Europe, with a specific focus on poverty and migration. We supported 17 children from 9 different EU countries to participate in this high level event. The children intervened during the panel debate giving statements and asking panellists pointed questions about what could be done to address issues related to migration and asylum, and poverty and social exclusion particularly from the children's perspective. Children's participation received strong support and recommendations were made to embed it in policy and decision-making.

Watch children offer their opinions on tackling challenges related to poverty and migration.

Practical tools

Eurochild produced a toolkit aimed at engaging young people in advocacy work themselves. The toolkit includes tools and methods to empower children to contribute to change in public decisionmaking. Produced for the Council of Europe, it is expected to be used by NGOs working with children and young people, including Eurochild members, as well as government officials at national, regional and local level, in light of commitments made under the Council of Europe Strategy for the Rights of the Child.

How children's voices are strengthening the children's rights community

As a children's rights network we advocate for the right of the child to be heard in all decisions that affect them. Eurochild is therefore, developing child participation standards, which will embed children's participation into its working structures. Eurochild will support initiatives led by children and young people, as well as peer-to peer work and involving children in research, service provision, community education (e.g. delivering sexual health education), and in advocacy. In this way, children themselves will be able to set the agenda.

In a span of less than 2 years, Eurochild has developed a strategy to realise this ambition and setup pilot forums for children to share their ideas and be an invaluable part of the children's rights community.

Connecting national to European

National Eurochild Forums

Children across Europe will be engaged in discussions to share their ideas and opinions through National Eurochild Forums which will be coordinated by experienced Eurochild members. Recognising the need to be representative of society itself, the Forums will include children from different backgrounds, with different experiences. Three National Eurochild Forums have now been piloted in Malta by President's Foundation for the Wellbeing of Society, in Estonia by Estonian Union for Child Welfare and in Bulgaria by National Network for Children.

Eurochild Children's Council

The National Eurochild Forums will share their ideas and opinions with the Eurochild Children's Council, a voluntary group of 12 children aged 13-16 years from across Europe selected as ambassadors for Eurochild's child participation work. This group of children have already engaged in meetings at the European Parliament, as part of the Europe We Want event in November 2017.

With a two-year work plan, the Eurochild Children's Council is eager to bring children's ideas into Eurochild's work.

The children are supported by experienced professionals from Eurochild membership as part of the Child Participation Reference Group.

Universal Children's Day 2017 A breakthrough moment for children's participation

For several years Eurochild has organised events with children in the European Parliament. We have witnessed a growing recognition of children's participation and its value in promoting democracy and active citizenship. This year's event, organised around Universal Children's Day, brought an important breakthrough.

"The Europe We Want": On 20 November, Eurochild held an event at the European Parliament, with the newly formed Eurochild Children's Council, in partnership with UNICEF, hosted by the European Parliament Intergroup on Children's Rights and under the auspices of European Parliament President Antonio Tajani.

In his video message President Tajani committed to an on-going process of consultation with children and an annual event in the EP Plenary with children to take stock of progress. This is a significant achievement for the children's rights community in terms of recognition and furthering children's participation in decision-making.

Eurochild will be working towards making such an event in 2018 participatory and meaningful for children and the parliamentarians.

Members equipped to deliver change

This year we started preparing for a new Strategic Plan 2019-2021. We also lay the foundations for children's participation to be an integral part of how the network functions. As such, the 2017 General Assembly was a collaborative effort between members and children, working together to create a vision and plan for the future.

New coalitions join National Partner Network

Our National Partner Networks are the go-to membership based organisations. They provide a bridge between European and national advocacy which is so critical for advancing children's rights across Europe. This year, we appointed three new NPNs in Estonia, Latvia and England, totalling 21 NPNs which represent over 2,000 children's rights organisations in Europe.

NPNs meet every six months to share, compare and learn from each other on how to best advance children's rights in their respective countries. A particular focus this year was the situation of children in migration and how to protect their rights. We brought in expertise from sister networks PICUM (the Platform for International Cooperation on Undocumented Migrants) and Missing Children Europe to learn about the latest developments at EU level and where to focus advocacy efforts.

Impact of Brexit on children

With Brexit negotiations underway, the National Partner Networks supported their UK and Irish children's rights counterparts in calling for children's voices to be heard in the process. We issued a collective statement and call to action on the impact of Brexit on children and young people on 19 June 2017. These demands were sent by Eurochild's UK and Irish members to negotiators on both sides. They also brought children to Brussels to discuss their concerns with European parliamentarians. The recommendations from these events have been recognized as bringing important and novel perspectives to the discussions on citizen's rights.

Building a bridge between European and national advocacy efforts

Eurochild wants to strengthen members' advocacy capacity and to help them leverage EU policies and funding to influence national policies. In 2017, Eurochild supported three events in Spain, Serbia and Germany.

Towards an effective implementation of community-based services in the system of child care

Pamplona, Spain – 23-24 November FICE Spain (National Coordinator of Opening Doors for Europe's Children)

The Conference aimed at promoting an effective transition towards community-based services in children and youth care sector. The event brought together Spanish civil society and the national and regional governments to discuss new national legislation on deinstitutionalisation. Participants shared good practices linked to working with families, care-leavers, independent living, preventive services and youth participation. It opened discussions on how EU funds can and should be used in the future. Kamira S. Coop hosted the event with financial support from Eurochild and La Caixa Banking Foundation.

Investing in Children - Benefit for All Children

Belgrade, Serbia – 12 October Network of Organizations for Children of Serbia (MODS)

The International Conference, attended by Serbian Ministers, called for public resources to be aligned with policies and legislation aimed at reducing poverty and social exclusion of children. The event was organised prior to presentation of a draft law on financial support to families with children, and allowed discussions between civil society and government representatives on practical approaches to investing in children.

66 Investing in children is not only an investment in them [children] but also in increasing employability of their parents, primarily mothers, who through the more efficient provision of public services have, among other things, greater opportunities to enter the labour market and become economically stronger."

Mirjana Ćojbašić, State Secretary of the Serbian Ministry of Finance

Measuring Children's Rights: Why we need indicators?

Berlin, Germany – 21 June

The National Coalition Germany

(Network for the Implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child)

In 2014, the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child recommended that Germany develop indicators to measure implementation of children's rights. This event was able to showcase the experience from other countries, for example, Belgium where children's rights indicators have proved helpful in determining what data is missing and what questions remained unanswered. The National Coalition collected 100 questions from its members to assess the information needed to document the realisation of children's rights.

66 It is especially important to look where things are not going well, otherwise we only cement the status quo."
